Gettysburg Address

November 19, 1863

Four score and seven years ago our fathers brought forth on this continent a new nation, conceived in liberty, and dedicated to the proposition that all men are created equal.

Now we are engaged in a great civil war, testing whether that nation, or any nation, so conceived and so dedicated, can long endure. We are met on a great battle-field of that war. We have come to dedicate a portion of that field, as a final resting place for those who here gave their lives that that nation might live. It is altogether fitting and proper that we should do this.

But, in a larger sense, we can not dedicate, we can not consecrate, we can not hallow this ground. The brave men, living and dead, who struggled here, have consecrated it, far above our poor power to add or detract. The world will little note, nor long remember what we say here, but it can never forget what they did here. It is for us the living, rather, to be dedicated here to the unfinished work which they who fought here have thus far so nobly advanced. It is rather for us to be here dedicated to the great task remaining before us—that from these honored dead we take increased devotion to that cause for which they gave the last full measure of devotion—that we here highly resolve that these dead shall not have died in vain—that this nation, under God, shall have a new birth of freedom—and that government of the people, by the people, for the people, shall not perish from the earth.

What was gettysburg address speech about.

Abraham Lincoln (1809 - 1865) The Gettysburg Address is the most famous speech of the president of the United States, Abraham Lincoln, and one of the most cited speeches in the history of the United States. It was delivered in the dedication of the National Cemetery of the soldiers in Gettysburg, Pennsylvania, on November 19, 1863, during the American Civil War, four and a half months after the battle of Gettysburg. Price lists, contact information and order forms are available on the duplication services website. Access to the originals please use the Steps to determine if you need to complete a slide of calls in the prints and photographs Reading room to see the original elements. In some cases, a substitute (substitute image) is available, often in the form of a digital image, a copy print or microfilm. Is the article digitized? (A miniature image (small) is visible on the left). Yes, the element is digitized. Use the digital image preferably to request the original. All images can be seen in large size when found in any reading room at the Library of Congress. In some cases, there are only thumbnail images (small) available when it is outside the Library of Congress because the element is restricted by rights or has not been evaluated by rights restrictions. As a preservation measure, we generally do not serve an original element when there is a available digital image. If you have a compelling reason to see the original, consult a reference librarian. (Sometimes, the original is just too fragile to serve. For example, negative photo glass and film are particularly subject to damage. They are also easier to see online where they are presented as positive images. No, the element is not digitized. Go to #2. Does the access notice or call number fields indicate that there is a non-digital substitute, such as microfilm or prints? Yeah, there's another substitute. The reference staff can direct it to this substitute. No, another substitute doesn't exist. Go to #3. If you do not see a thumbnail or a reference to another substitute, fill in a slide of calls in the impressions and photographs of the reading room. In many cases, the originals can be served in a few minutes. Other materials require appointments later on the same day or in the future.
